John demonstrates independence and responsibility during writing lessons. He has effectively used the strategies modelled in class to draft poetry entries in his Writer's Notebook. He can make use of a web for brainstorming potential ideas, and can narrow down these ideas for further drafting. John understands that writing is a process, and has shown the ability to think flexibly about his written work. He eagerly accepts feedback when engaged in the revision process, and has both willingly, and confidently, experimented with writing techniques such as poetic line breaks, repetition, and simile.
